Blue Wolf Quoted in Wall Street Journal and Featured on Bloomberg TV

Blue Wolf Managing Partner Adam Blumenthal was recently interviewed by The Wall Street Journal for his perspective on private equity firms' abilities to close transactions in the current environment. The article entitled Rising Rates Fuel Boomlet In Buyouts, regarding investors' strong appetite for leveraged loans and the resulting impact on financing for corporate buyouts, reports:

Increased investor interest "absolutely means we're much more confident competing in sale processes," said Adam Blumenthal, co-founder of private-equity firm Blue Wolf Capital, which specializes in transactions for smaller companies. "Sellers are confident that if we come in and say there will be a financing package on the table, it will be there."

Adam also recently appeared on Bloomberg TV to discuss the role of private equity in job creation. Using the example of Blue Wolf's recent investment in Gloucester Engineering Co., Inc., Adam made the point that a disciplined operations policy and the ability to export products to new markets will be the key to corporate growth as well as job growth. A private equity model that can restructure a business to focus on efficiency, quality and growth prospects will create a thriving company that is competitive in a global marketplace. This model has a positive impact on the domestic job market.

Blue Wolf is happy to be singled out as a firm that exemplifies this positive trend.
